Elder Scams & Fraud

Older adults are targeted every day via the internet, email, texts, social media, mail, in-person, and by telephone. Nearly every scam is designed to trick an older adult into sending money or providing their personal information. With the elderly population growing and seniors racking up more than $3 billion in losses annually, elder scams and fraud are a growing problem.

What are the signs?

- Calling or emailing you, claiming to be from the government and asking you for money.
- Asking you to pay money or taxes upfront to receive a prize or a gift.
- Asking for access to your finances - such as your ATM cards, bank accounts, credit cards, investment accounts.
- Pressuring you to “act now” or else the deal will go away OR someone who seems to be trying hard to give you a “great deal” without time to answer your questions.

How you can help

- Recognize scam attempts and end all communication with the perpetrator.
- Search Online for the contact information (name, email, phone number, address) and the proposed offer. Other people have likely posted information online about individuals and businesses trying to run scams.
- Take precautions to protect your identity. If a criminal gains access to your device or account, immediately contact your financial institution to place protections on your accounts, and monitor your accounts and personal information for suspicious activity.
- Never give or send any personally identifiable information, money, jewelry, gift cards, checks, or wire information to unverified people or businesses.
- Make sure all computer anti-virus and security software and malware protections are up-to-date.
